Notice - Legal Practice Council law library

The Legal Practice Council (LPC) wishes to inform and remind all legal practitioners about the Council's law library which is available to assist all legal practitioners and candidate legal practitioners with the information that they may require in their day-to-day provision of legal services such as case law, legislation, commentaries, forms and precedents, gazette notices, journal articles and so on.

The services are provided by our professional, cyber-competent librarians and we try to always reach out to our legal practitioners and others, when possible, to provide useful information electronically whilst respecting copyright and fair use agreements.

The library has an online help desk service available to currently practising and non-practising legal practitioners. Our librarians will also guide you in finding materials for your research, both in hard copy and online.

Membership of the LPC Library

Full membership, including the right to access all physical and electronic resources as well as to borrow library materials are subject to LPC Library rules. The library services are available at no cost for all practising legal practitioners and to registered candidate legal practitioners (candidate attorneys and pupils), including those doing community service at Law Clinics and Justice Centres.

For non-practising legal practitioners, the use of the library for information from access to the free helpdesk service (excluding the ability to borrow library materials) is available for any non-practising legal practitioner on the roll of the Council.

Our automated help desk system helpdesk@lpc.org.za records and manages requests as well as responses, thus allowing all our librarians to deal efficiently with electronic requests as quickly as possible.
